

Capario Automated Claims Testing

You must have a valid submitter account flagged as “Test” internally with Capario before you begin testing your EDI claims transactions. We do not check the TEST/PROD indicator in the inbound EDI file. The TEST/PROD indicator is set internally by Capario. You will need to coordinate with your Implementation Engineer when your account is ready to be moved to a production status.

Once you have received confirmation of your account ID, login and password you can start testing your EDI claims with Capario. If you are a new client and will be using the same assigned ID for your production claims, the sending method during testing will be the same method used in production. Here are some points that you will need to know during testing:

- You will be assigned a dedicated Implementation Engineer who will initially set-up your account, train you on how to submit your EDI transactions and help answer any questions during testing.
- Our front-ends are available to send test files 24/7; however, automated testing is only available during normal business hours.
- Turnaround time on receipt of test results will be between 30 and 60 minutes after receiving your test file(s) during normal business hours.
- Support from your Implementation Engineer will only be available during normal business hours.
- Important note: The Capario trace number for all test claims will end in “TST”. The Capario trace number is 15 characters, 12 numeric + TST. First three will be the Julian date + sequencing number + TST. Example: 109001860410TST
- Your test report will be returned in your reports directory and will have an extension of .REC.
- Our test environment is a mirror of our production environment. Any rejections that you encounter during test, you will also experience in production.
- Claims submitted to the test environment are processed against Capario edits and are not sent to the payer; therefore, you might experience additional rejections from the payer once you move to a production status.
- For a list of our Capario payer IDs, please see:

Capario looks forward to working with you during your implementation and testing. If you have not already been assigned and contacted by your Implementation Engineer, please contact your Sales or Account Manager for further assistance.

On behalf of everyone at Capario, we welcome you and look forward to working with you.

Sincerely,
Capario Implementation
